DISCOVER MONTALVO

Built in 1912 by Senator James Duvall Phelan, Montalvo was a center of artistic, social, and political life in Northern California. Writers and artists were invited to the villa to work on individual artistic projects in an environment rich in dialogue and fellowship.

Upon his death, Phelan bequeathed Montalvo to the state of California to serve as a site for the advancement of art, music, literature, and architecture—a legacy that continues to this day in the form of Montalvo Arts Center.

For over 75 years, Montalvo has served the community as a center for creativity, offering art classes for all ages, outdoor art installations, performing arts events, festivals, educational opportunities, artist residencies, and more. Today, Montalvo and its programs serve nearly 200,000 visitors each year in the heart of Silicon Valley.
